

Dear Presbyterian Leader,

This week we're launching three new materials. In our new Leading Voices essay—free to all visitors of our site—Eugenia Gamble explores the often unpredictable, yet always memorable, ways in which all of us are called into relationship with Christ. In our new Leader Reader newsletter—free to subscribers and additional leaders in their congregation—Thomas G. Long helps us discover how we embody our faith.

We are also excited to present a new Doctrine and Beliefs study, "The Sacrament of Baptism," by David Gambrell. In this one-session study, Gambrell describes what the Bible says about baptism and the history of baptism in the Christian tradition. Additionally, we learn how Presbyterians celebrate baptism and get answers to common questions about the sacrament of baptism—Can a person who is not baptized be saved? Can anyone be baptized?

Peace,

Christ Calls, We Respond

by Eugenia Gamble

In this month's Leading Voices essay, Gamble lays out the simple truth: we are each called. God has a purpose—a unique, specific, focused, powerful purpose—for each of our lives.

Embodied Leadership

by Thomas G. Long

Presbyterians insist not only on an educated minister, but also on an educated laity. However, Long argues, there's more to knowledge than head knowledge and heart knowledge—there's body knowledge. In this week's Leader Reader we'll discover what this means and what it means to embody our faith.
